Senate due motion on WVU-MU game

By LEIGH FERGUSON
News Editor

A motion that the Student Senate support the challenge of a game between West Virginia University and Marshall will go before the Senate at tonight's meeting.

Nitro sophomore Sen. Suzanne Maddox said Monday that she will present the motion before the Senate.

Concerning the challenge put forth by The Parthenon in Friday's paper, she said, "I think it's great."

"A lot of students have come to me encouraging the Student Government to back the proposal for a WVU-MU basketball game," she added.

She said that she would like to see the game held either over the holidays or after the basketball season in the Charleston Civic Center.

Although many students are in favor of the idea, she continued, many have "expressed the idea that WVU won't accept the challenge."

When asked about his opinion concerning a game, Student Body President Mike Farrell said, "I think it's an excellent idea. It would bring the two schools together athletically and further chances of bringing them together academically and financially."

The Herald-Dispatch, Huntington's morning newspaper, also added its support to the proposal, saying, "the two universities ought to be playing one another in both major sports."

Other outside-the-campus support came from John D. (Jay) Rockefeller IV, member of the House of Delegates from Kanawha County.

"It probably would make an excellent game. 'Yes I would be for it,' he said.

Vol. 67

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.

No. 40

Farrell terms it successful

Student Body President Mike Farrell, Huntington senior, has termed the new ticket policy for home basketball games "very fair and very successful."

Under the new plan, students with activity cards may obtain reserve seat tickets in advance of home games. About 2,200 seats in Memorial Field House are set aside for this purpose.

Policy Publicized

Regarding Saturday's home game with Morris Harvey College, Farrell said that students had "an ample opportunity" to see the game. All available student tickets were picked up, he said.

Farrell stated that notice was given in The Parthenon about the new seating plan and that Athletic Director Eddie Barrett made an "extra effort" to publicize the policy.

Asked if he felt the 2,200-seat capacity was an accurate estimate of how many full-time students wanted to attend each game, Farrell replied, "Right now, yes."

He said that all students with "personal initiative" were able to attend the game. "All students who were entitled to see the game, and who wanted to, got to," he added.

V-P Declines Comment

Vice-President Paul Matheny, Charleston senior, declined comment on the new policy. Stating that he did not attend the game, Matheny said he should not judge the seating plan.

Joining Farrell in support of the policy was Jim Slicer, Huntington junior and co-ordinator of the forthcoming Emphasis program.

Slicer said he believed that "there were no students who couldn't get in if they wanted to."

He added, however, that the reserve seat quota should be flexible. "If more than 2,200 students want in, there should be more than 2,200 reserved student tickets," Slicer said.

GOP COMMITTEE FORMED

A Marshall Committee has been established by the Marshall University Young Republican Club. "The committee was set up to work with the Student Government in an attempt to dissolve student apathy," said Lee Call, Charleston senior and committee chairman. He said the committee wants to make available to the students a list of organizations on campus and their qualifications. More students would know which groups have interests similar to their own.

Reaction to reserve seating varies

By T. M. MURDOCK
Sports Co-Editor

Reserve seating of students brought mixed sentiments from students who attended the MU-Morris Harvey game Saturday night.

The consensus before the game was: "where can we get some tickets?" "Do you think reserve student seating will work?" and "If I'm late for the game will my seat be lost?"

After the game the opinions were: "I really liked that seating arrangement," "our section was too crowded," and "I sure wish I could have gotten a ticket."

Monday morning, MU Athletic Director Eddie Barrett, discussed his new seating policy, which allows 2,200 students to attend the game on a reserve ticket basis.

"I thought it was successful," said Mr. Barrett. "Of course there were some disappointed students, and rightfully so. However, as a whole it worked real well."

Rumors spread over campus Friday that many MU students were dissatisfied with the reserve student seating. Many students who had reserve tickets openly declared their sentiments about probable discomfort of crowded sections.

Through interviews with students who attended the game, the overall feeling seemed to be that of satisfaction. But several students who were late in trying to obtain tickets still voiced disapproval of reserve seating.

During the game, several students did not sit in the right section, which explains some of the nonexistent "extra space" in some sections.

One unidentified student summed up sentiments toward the seating situation by saying, "I liked it fine; however, it could lead to problems if you didn't get tickets."

Another point of discussion by students was a smoke screen that engulfed the players during the closing minutes of the game. The smoke screen, which was due to cigarette smoking inside Memorial Field House, was reported by several students as an "obstruction of vision."

Victory leaps

Pep rally is termed big success

An estimated 500 people turned out Saturday afternoon for Marshall University's first basketball pep rally of the season.

"It made our efforts worthwhile," Veterans Club President Howard Salsitz, Parkersburg freshman, said. "Spirits were high, as had been hoped." Salsitz termed the rally a big success.

President Stewart H. Smith told students he was concerned about the conduct at basketball games, and that he hoped students would join with him in helping preserve the reputation of Marshall. Dr. Smith remarked that the atmosphere at the game was fine.

The rally, sponsored by the Robe, T.H.E. Group and the Veterans Club, lived up to all expectations, according to a Veterans Club spokesman.

The rally featured the band, Kappa Alpha's cannon, the cheerleaders and majorettes.

Bob Redd, captain of the 1967-68 Marshall University basketball team, introduced the varsity squad.

An amusing incident occurred when three-year-old Teresa Miller, daughter of Veterans Club adviser, Gary Miller, mistook

Marco for "a dancing teddy bear."

The Veterans Club has no plans for another pep rally in the immediate future.

Tickets available

Students may pick up tickets today and tomorrow for the next home basketball game, Dec. 16 with Kent State University, according to Sports Information Director Bob Campbell.

Tickets may be obtained Wednesday either at the North Parlor of Old Main or the Athletic Department between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Thursday, the tickets may be picked up at the Athletic Department only, between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

The same rules for picking up tickets as were used for the Morris Harvey game will be observed.

Coach is sought

The athletic board has begun interviewing prospective candidates for the head football coaching job at Marshall.

The athletic board met Monday afternoon "to interview a prospective candidate for head football coach," according to Hunter Hardman, chairman.

Four candidates are scheduled to be interviewed by the athletic board but names of the candidates were not available.

The coaches will be interviewed separately and will be on campus during the week.

Tight standards will repeal exam

"Students in West Virginia don't protest," was a comment made by "Jay" Rockefeller, member of the West Virginia House of Delegates.

Closer to home is the observation that MARSHALL students don't protest—or rather have not in the past. They just take all that is handed to them, or rather dumped on them, without questioning.

Marshall has seemed to favor the status quo, and for good reason. It is the easiest road to follow, especially when no one disagrees. Why change anything if change is not called for?

Between now and February the student body of Marshall will have its chance to act.

The vote concerning abolishment of the English Qualifying Exam will come before the February faculty meeting.

Every student now has the opportunity to tell the faculty exactly how he feels about the exam in order to encourage faculty backing of student desire.

The English Qualifying Exam, as the 1967 Leadership Seminar resolved, is unfair and inconsistent.

Since the resolution was adopted, the only two favorable public comments for the exam have come from the former chairman and the present chairman of the English Department, while other faculty members have made such comments as, "Why can't my department give a test that is required for graduation?" and "I pass everyone," and "it seems we are only evaluating the competence of the English Department."

Once a student has passed the two required English composition courses, his required math or science courses, and completed the 128 hours of study, who is to say he can not graduate?

Inconsistencies of the test enter after the test has been taken. Exam grading is entirely a matter of the graders discretion. Pity the poor student who just happens to have a strict professor grade his exam!

It is known that more than a few students have not taken the exam and have still graduated on time with permission of the administration, while others have failed the test and told later, when graduation time is close, "It's not that bad, you can graduate."

Why have such a test when it is a bother to the faculty, unfair to the student, and not a true criterion for graduation?

Why not simply just tighten standards in the English Department when the student is taking English courses, as all must, and abolish this foolish test of no one's ability.

Abolishing staff listings good, but it should not be the end

The Student Leadership Seminar should be commended for its role in abolishing "staff" listings in class schedule booklets. Mr. Staff was declared legally dead by President Stewart H. Smith, when he asked the academic deans to have departmental chairmen submit revised schedules naming teachers for each class.

This successful forray began at Cedar Lakes in Ripley. Approximately 50 student leaders met to discuss the seminar topic "The student and His New Thought." The abolishment of "staff" from schedule booklets was the first of four resolutions adopted.

Upon returning from the conference, signs were made up protesting "staff" and pickets were assigned to the Registrar's office. The pickets were orderly and effective.

This cohesive effort between students and their leaders shows what an organized group can accomplish. Not everyone will agree with the resolutions proposed by the seminar, but the important point is that students have an opinion on questions concerning their welfare.

This short range victory should not lull students and leaders into a false sense of accomplishment.

Tongue-in-cheek

Through the use of its secret grapevine, The Parthenon has learned that there is a subversive movement on campus, and one that members of the Leadership Seminar should beware.

Faculty members, in retaliation to the anti-staff movement, are planning to picket registration until the names of prospective students are made known to them.

They feel that they have as much right to know in advance the names of the students who will be in their classes as the students have to know the teacher's names.

The problem, obviously, is whether or not students will organize to anti-pro-staff pickets, causing the teachers to form anti-anti-pro staff, causing the . . .

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

The name of the game used to be basketball, but now that Mr. Genius has arrived on the scene it's called MONEY. Trying to get student tickets for an MU basketball game is quite a chore. No longer can you present your activity card, and get the seat to which you are not only ENTITLED, but which you also PAID for. Now you can't even sit with a date.

Mr. Genius saw to that. He's selling seats that should go to students, to outsiders. Why give a student his seat, when you can sell that same seat at twice the price to someone else? It not only makes sense, but it also makes money.

However getting back to not being able to sit with a date. Picture Bob and Betty Marshall student planning on a home game, but two weeks in advance! They pick up tickets at different times, thinking the tickets are good for anywhere in the SMALL student section. Much to their surprise they have seats in different sections. Now let's switch to the field house.

Bob speaks, 'Gee Betty I didn't know we had to sit in different sections. This is terrible.'

Betty, 'Well it could be worse. After all absence does make the heart grow fonder.'

Bob thinking furiously, 'Wait I have a perfect idea, I was a Boy Scout, and you were a Girl Scout, let's signal each other with flags.'

Betty, joyously throwing her arms about Bob shouts, 'Wonderful.'

The game is under way; all the separated couples begin waving their flags, but wait. The officials fear it is some diversion staged to distract the opposition. Quickly they call a technical on Marshall for unsportsmanlike conduct. However, undaunted the separated couples continuing waving. Once again the officials call a technical. At this time Coach Johnson is off the bench in disbelief. Could it be happening, or is it just a bad dream?

At the final buzzer of the game the fans aren't really worried about who won. Their only concern is finding their date. Is this to be the scene every time Marshall has a home game? I hope not. This situation with the tickets must be cleared up, and quickly, or every game will be as the one described.

The only thing one can say, and this is a quote from John Lennon of the Beatles, "A splendid time is guaranteed for all."

MIKE ROONEY
York, Pa., senior

To the Editor:

Student apathy, especially toward athletic events, has been attacked time and again on our campus. In some cases this is justified, but in most it is not.

We recognize that the Marshall University Athletic Department needs the money it acquires from season and reserved tickets. But what about the students who have previously paid for their tickets? And shouldn't students, the backbone of any university, be recognized enough to be given at least half of the seats in the field house?

If the University requires students to pay for athletic events in advance, it should make provisions for more student seating. Or it should allow students the opportunity to purchase tickets if they desire them.

When it comes to the point that money takes precedence over student interest, apathy can only increase.

To the editor:

At the present moment all I can do is to give thanks for my life. The accident which occurred at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Elm Street last week was one which missed me only by a matter of about two seconds. I was just crossed the street when the car struck the boy who was crossing the street.

This is an accident which probably could have happened long ago. Pedestrians place their lives at stake every time they cross that intersection. It is true that the city painted a crosswalk at that corner, but the crosswalk serves more as a hinderance than an aid to the problem. Students still cross the street, but the cars do not stop for the crosswalk.

Would it be too much to ask that a stoplight be installed at that corner?

It is true that cars would have to drive very slow through a series of three stoplights, but should it not only serve as a vital safety device for the lives of the hundreds of students who cross the street at that point every day?

I would very much like to see some action taken on this matter immediately. I am sure that you, the students will be in agreement with me. Let's make our plea to the administration and to the public officials of the city of Huntington!

Third Avenue parking port facility due

Construction may begin in the spring on a four- or five-story parking port on the north side of Third Avenue going east from Elm Street.

Joseph S. Soto, vice president of business and finance, said a tract of land, 180 feet long and 140 feet deep, is being cleared to make way for the project.

The facility is expected to accommodate 200 or more automobiles.

The size of the parking port will be determined by the money that can be raised through the sale of revenue bonds. The amount of the bond issue will depend on the money to be obtained from parking fees which will be used to retire the bonds.

"It is possible that a pedestrian walkway will be built over Third Avenue," Vice President Soto said.

An underground passageway, he said, would not be feasible because of low-lying land in that vicinity.

Money for the purchase of the Third Avenue site came from interest earned from the sale of $5 million in revenue bonds before the funds were needed to pay Academic Center and library-addition contractors.

Construction may begin in April.

At present, 48 units and four apartments for married students exist on the second campus.

Construction funds are available through the sale of $9 million in revenue bonds.

Pamela Brick, Nitro sophomore, had a hair-raising reason for being late to work at the Journalism Department last Tuesday.

Miss Brick, a coed in Prichard Hall, was cleaning her sweater with a rotating electric clothes brush when it "attacked" her. In a flash, the brush was tightly entangled in her hair.

Not being able to remove the "angry" instrument, Miss Brick went with her roommate to the construction site at Hodges Hall. There, a worker removed the battery-powered brush with a small screwdriver.

Cross-country at Marshall has been considered more of a handicap to MU sports than a sport that would bring recognition to the campus.

It's considered a minor sport, but only because no one pays to see the team perform.

Marshall in the past has been at the bottom in cross-country at the Mid-American Conference Championships because there was a lack of student interest and ability. But go over to Bob Saunders' office, cross-country coach, and ask him what he thinks about the future of cross-country at Marshall and he will be more than glad to tell you.

Saunders is optimistic, especially after the showing this year by the freshman and varsity in MAC finals.

It is hard to build a good team without some depth and experience. From last year's promising freshmen team only two returned.

What happened to them? Why did they quit? Few students told these athletes that their sport was as important as any other sport in the MAC or at Marshall.

Just ask any student: "Did you hear about the cross-country team?" The answer would usually be, "What's that," or "It's a minor sport isn't it?"

Saunders feels if more scholarships can be given and some interest can be stirred, Marshall won't be the "patsy" of the conference in cross-country.

Marshall was to have hosted the conference meet this year but didn't because of the lack of facilities to handle the many runners.

In other words, there's nowhere to run. "If we could offer a good running course we could recruit some better boys," Saunders said.

The Herd ended up 1-8 for the regular season, but the young team consisted of mostly sophomores.

Bill Hill, Wheeling sophomore, placed 18th in the MAC meet, the highest any Marshall cross-country runner has ever finished.

Greg Connelly, Baltimore sophomore, finished 29th, also an impressive showing since the best performance in the past four years was a 34th place finish.

Kent State University took the first three individual places, but their next finisher was 24th. They placed third in team totals.

The MAC champions, Miami of Ohio took fourth, fifth, eighth, ninth and fourteenth places.

The Marshall freshmen in the MAC championship finished in a tie for fourth place with Bowling Green.

The Herd was led by Stanley Backus who finished fourteenth.

Out of 42 runners, Marshall finished with five men in the top thirty.

The MU runners were Arthur Weeks, Long Island, N.Y., 21st; Ron Woodson, Charleston, 23rd; Dana Ferrell, Ceredo-Kenova, 25th, and Charles Wolfe, Charleston, 26th.

Grapplers meet Toledo today

Marshall's wrestling team will open its dual meet season today at 7 p.m. in Gullickson Hall with Toledo University.

Larry Coyer's wrestlers placed second Saturday in a quadrangular meet won by host Ohio University.

Denison placed third and Morehead State University was last.

Bruce Wallace, Middleport, Ohio, junior, got the Herd's only championship — in the 191-pound class.

Following the Toledo match, the Herd will face Morehead State University at home Dec. 13, at 7 p.m.

Wants to stay in this area

MU recruiting Kentuckian

That big blonde-headed guy who was introduced at the alumni-sponsored pro basketball exhibition and the varsity-freshman game—want to know who he is?

He's Tom Roberts from Russell, Ky. Which, unless one has a good knowledge of Kentucky basketball, won't help too much.

Say he's 6-8½, weighs 215 pounds, wears a size 14½ shoe and is rated the best "big" basketball player in Kentucky's high schools and one gets an idea of what Roberts was doing at those games.

He's being recruited by Marshall. Which isn't too surprising because, according to his high school coach, over 200 other colleges and universities are doing the same thing.

Roberts is a senior at Russell High School (just outside Ashland) where he's been a member of the varsity since he was a 6-5 freshman. Since then, he's won all - District, all - Region, all-Northeastern Kentucky Conference, and all-Ashland Invitational Tournament honors.

In a recent poll of Kentucky prep coaches by a Louisville paper, Roberts was rated the fourth best player in the state and the best center.

Last year he led his team to its first state tournament berth in 20 years. And this year in the Louisville poll, his team was ranked third in the state.

"We want the boy very much," said coach Ellis Johnson. "He knows we want him, but I don't believe in over-recruiting a boy."

14 volleyball teams in intramurals

Volleyball intramurals are in full swing with 14 teams participating, according to Joanne Frick, Pittsburgh, Pa. junior and game chairman.

Winners in the first scheduled games Wednesday were: Independent I over Sigma Kappa II 14-3, 15-1 and Sigma Kappa I over Alpha Sigma Alpha 15-4, 15-2. While Prichard Hall II won the first game 12-6, Alpha Xi Delta won two out of three games with scores of 8-5 and 12-6. West Hall and Prichard I both drew byes. The games were regular eight minute or 15 point games, with one team leading in two matches to be considered the winner.

Intramural action continues in its second week with volleyball for women.

Laidley Hall beat Phi Mu 15-4 and 9-4. Prichard Hall won over West Hall with scores of 12-10, 13-7, although West had one 10-8 win. Alpha Chi Omega and Prichard Hall II both won by default.

Games scheduled for Wednesday beginning at 5 p.m. are: Independent I and Sigma Kappa I; Laidley Hall and Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Mu versus West Hall.

Other games will be scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 7 after Monday's winners are decided.

MU varsity basketball team slated for 3 televised games

The Marshall University basketball team will be featured in three locally televised Mid-American Conference Games-of-the Week this season.

The Herd will be playing in the first two televised games — the first at Bowling Green on Jan. 6 and the second at Memorial Field House, hosting Ohio University on Jan. 13. The Herd will also face pre-season favorite Toledo at the Field House on Feb. 10.

"These televised games are doing a lot for the image of the MAC," Head Basketball Coach Ellis Johnson said. "I am all for these games".

However, Johnson would be even more pleased if the TV games were held at night.

"If the games were held at night I don't think it would affect the crowds at all," said Johnson. "But we still had about 4,500-5,000 people turn out last year and that isn't bad".

Coach Johnson also feels the TV audience puts added pressure on the players. "You would have to say the players receive more pressure with the games being televised" said Johnson. "It's only natural."

Along with Marshall, Toledo, Miami of Ohio and Bowling Green will be playing three TV games this season. Ohio University, Western Michigan and Kent State will each play two.

The series of nine televised games is produced by TV Sports of Paterson, N. J. which is in its third year with the MAC.

"I feel it is here to stay," said Coach Johnson.

MU takes opener with MH, 88-69

Sellout crowd at '67 opener

By LARRY MAYNOR
Sports Writer

Since Marshall lost to Marquette in the semi-finals of the NIT last year, MU followers have been chanting, "Wait till next year."

"Next year" arrived Saturday night and the waiting came to an end. As expected, the Herd defeated the Golden Eagles of Morris Harvey College, 88-69.

A sellout crowd of 6,350 saw MU soar to a 17-4 lead, then continue to pump in points from the outside to register a 44-28 half-time score.

Led by Captain Bob Redd's all-around play, the Thundering Herd increased its lead to 27 points, 82-55, with 4:18 remaining. Coach Ellis Johnson then replaced his regulars, and the substitutes finished the game.

Morris Harvey had a poor shooting night from the floor, making only 23 of 82 attempts for a 28 per cent average. The Herd made only 34 of 91 tries for a 37.4 average.

From the free-throw line, the Eagles made 23 of 27 shots for a 85.2 average. The Herd made 20 of 32 shots for a 62.5 average.

The Herd's playmaker, Dan D'Antoni, sat out most of the first half due to personal fouls. He was replaced by senior guard Joe Dawson.

Forward Bob Redd and pivot-man Bob Allen also had three fouls at the end of the first half.

"We looked real sharp at times," Johnson said. "Our outside shooting was pretty good. As a whole we played the kind of game that I thought we would play."

According to team captain Bob Redd, the game went pretty much as he expected. "We made just about as many mistakes as I thought we would. But we also made as many good plays."

Jim Davidson, the game's leading scorer with 20 points, appraised the contest as being "a real good opening ball game."

Morris Harvey Coach Rick Meckfessel was not disappointed with his team's performance. "We had a poor shooting percentage first half, but we did do better after halftime" said the Eagle coach.

He saw individual improvement in the MU team, but said that as a team it didn't look as good as last year. "I think they will be an improved team," said Meckfessel, but they didn't look as good tonight."

Morris Harvey players Mike Curry and Gerald Martin commented on the performance of the Herd.

Curry, leading scorer for the Eagles with 16 points, echoed Meckfessel. "If they're better, they didn't show it tonight."

Martin, a Huntington native, viewed the matter in a different light. "I'll tell you what is the matter with them," said Martin, "They think a team is going to come out and play dead. They are going to get surprised this year."

RICKY HALL, McDowell, Ky., sophomore, and a Morris Harvey player scramble for a loose ball. Hall scored two points in his varsity debut against the Golden Eagles. Jim Davidson, Logan junior, was high scorer for the Herd. Bob Allen, Port Huron, Mich., senior, and George Stone, Covington, Ky., senior, were high rebounders, with 15 and 14, respectively.

Super mover!

3 named reading winners

Three Huntington students have won the Speech 103 reading contest. Sandy Shea, sophomore, Steve Oxly, sophomore and Patricia Mann, freshman, according to Mary Beth Elmore, instructor of speech.

The students were chosen from 45 participants. Each speech class entered one student from its class to compete.

A speech contest started Monday and will continue for three weeks. The contest will be conducted in the same manner as the reading contest. Students will give prepared speeches and three will be chosen.

A speech convocation will be held Jan. 11 and all of the winners will participate.

The students giving prepared speeches will be judged at the convocation and first and second place winners will be announced, said Mrs. Elmore.

Summer job applications due

It is now the time for students to begin thinking about summer employment. The placement office now has openings for summer jobs. These include overseas work, federal agencies and experiments in overseas living.

Around the first of the year a summer directory of all states having summer camps and resorts are listed. Applications for private placement by a placement bureau in New York are also available.

"Because of the increased number of young people in our colleges and universities, summer labor market has become crowded, congested and competitive," and . . . 100 per cent aggressive effort on the part of the student looking into every available job possibility," said Stephen Naymick, assistant placement director.

Scholar due here today

Dr. Franz Bigmaier, a Fulbright exchange student at Marshall in 1950 and a native of Bavaria, will visit the campus today through Sunday.

He is currently on a Fulbright tour of American educational institutions.

For the past two years Dr. Bigmaier has been a special counselor of the Pedagogic Center in West Berlin. He is working in the field of reading ability of elementary and high school systems, the field which he studied at Marshall.

He has kept in touch with Marshall through Dr. Walter Perl, professor of German, who visited him in Munich, Bavaria.

While at Marshall, Dr. Bigmaier will visit classes in several fields tomorrow and Friday. There will also be a reception for him Thursday at 11 a.m. in North Parlor of Old Main for faculty and interested students.

Democrats are welcome too!

All interested students have been invited to participate in the Republican mock political convention scheduled March 14 on campus.

A spokesman for the planners said any student, regardless of party affiliation, is requested to fill out a form now available at the Student Government office.

The forms are for the purpose of securing state delegations and special committees to draft platforms and rules, and to actually participate in the convention.

Forms should be filled out and returned to the Student Government office this week.

New physics courses offered

For the first time graduate courses in physics have been offered to Marshall University students and those engineers and chemists employed in the local industry, stated Dr. Donald C. Martin, professor of physics.

Professor Martin said two graduate courses, "quantum mechanics physics 580" and "X-ray diffraction physics 616" will be offered in the spring semester.

$12-million fund available

Ever heard of "open-end" financing?

Well, Marshall has it — thanks to enabling legislation passed by the West Virginia Legislature.

It's quite a phenomenon for a money-starved institution.

Right now, for example, Marshall has a $12 million building credit fund which can be used for renovating or expanding dormitory and dining facilities. Actually, this money already has been earmarked for various projects already completed, under way, or about to be undertaken. These include $9,000,000 for renovation and expansion of Laidley and Hodges dormitories and construction of the Twin Tower dormitory; $1,515,000 for the South Hall addition; $500,000 for West Hall; $250,000 for Prichard Hall; $200,000 for married students' quarters, and $200,000 for the present dining hall. The total is about $12 million.

These projects are being financed by revenue bonds. As these bonds are paid off by room rent and dining hall fees, additional bonds can be sold to finance other projects up to the $12 million maximum.

In other words, if Marshall retires $3 million in bonds it can sell another $ million in bonds to undertake other dormitory or dining facility projects.

"We have a $12 million building credit fund from now until the end of time," said Joseph S. Soto, vice president of building and finance.

Campus resident population will go from 1,400 now to 2,890 September, 1969, when the Twin Tower dormitory is completed.

To help retire revenue bonds, room rents will be increased to $166.26 per semester next fall. This includes a three per cent sales tax. Room rent is $166.26 in South Hall now.

If three coeds are in a room where two would normally be accommodated, Vice President Soto said their rent would be proportionately less.

Farrell says march, lobbying are planned

Plans for a lobbyist group and a student march next semester on the state Capitol are being made, according to Student Body President Mike Farrell, Huntington senior.

"We are organizing the group to show that students at Marshall are not content with the secondary type of education they have been getting as opposed to West Virginia University," said Frank Cummings, commissioner of Social Affairs and Huntington junior.

Some of the issues the lobbyists will discuss will be seeking a budget for Marshall to go through the legislature "without pruning," and expressing student opinions on the Kanawha County Graduate Center and the proposed Board of Governors, said Farrell.

Farrell said that the plans are the outcome of a dinner in Charleston where John D. Rockefeller IV spoke to representatives of the state's colleges and universities.

Marshall's representatives were Farrell, Cummings and Student Government Business Manager James Wooten, Beckley junior.

Cummings said that "Jay" Rockefeller, in his speech, said that the state should have two outstanding universities, Marshall and West Virginia University, and stop quibbling over how much money to give each school.

The lobbyist group will visit the legislature in January or February, said Farrell.

"The lobbyist group will consist of students from all over the state, so they may approach their legislators and talk to them individually," Cummings said.

"A march on the Capitol probably will be conducted after the lobbying visit," he said.
